3. At this point of time, Shri Gajendra Vasu, learned counsel for the respondents, raises an objection that in the other cases which were implemented all over India there might be a slight difference that the question of skilled or unskilled labourers may come in. He would say that these people, because they are not matriculates, may be considered as unskilled and others may have been matriculates and therefore skilled. Even though this is a very tenuous distinction, we will leave it to the authorities concerned to look into this matter and pass an appropriate order. But, if there is equity and equality between those who have been granted this benefit, then Annexure-A9 in OA No. 1720/2018 must be followed to the hilt.

4. The OA is allowed to this extent. The order to be implemented within the next two months. No order as to costs.
