Heard learned counsel for the applicant. He stated that the applicant had appeared in the Civil Services (Main) Examination, 2000 and in the personality test conducted by U.P.S.C. on 27.4.2001 as well. Learned counsel stated that in his written test the applicant had never received such low marks as were awarded to him in the aforestated examination. He made a representation to the U.P.S.C. for revaluation of his answer sheets which has gone unheeded. Learned counsel drew our attention to Annexure-4 which is a newspaper report regarding a controversy over the mix up of results of 1998 Civil Services (Main) Examination. We find that in this newspaper ^{report} the complaint relates to modified results of that examination which was declared three months after the results were first declared and the appointment letters of the candidates were withheld. The present case is not similar to the mix up reported in Annexure-4. To a specific query, the learned counsel stated that so far his knowledge goes, there are no rules with the U.P.S.C. for reassessment of answer sheets. However, he stated that such rules do exist in the Public Service Commission of certain States.

2. We are not convinced about the argument of the applicant that just because he had received higher marks in the earlier tests he could not have attained lower marks in the 2000 examination. In the absence of any rules relating to reassessment of the answer sheets, we do not find any merit in the present OA which is dismissed in limini.
