seeking a review on grounds which he had already urged at the time of hearing of the O.A and was elaborately considered in the order. In other words the petitioner is challenging the wisdom of the reasoning in the order. There is no averment that there is any error apparent on the face of the record nor is there any other relevant facts or circumstances which justifies a review of the order. If the petitioner is aggrieved or dissatisfied with a decision given the remedy open for him is to challenge the order in appeal before the Hon'ble Supreme Court seek^{ing} a Special Leave. This R.A. is totally berfts of any merit and is therefore rejected.
