by filing the reply. Learned advocate for the applicant submitted that the applicant has expired on 21st May, 1992 during pendency of this application. He submitted that the respondents may allow the widow and children of the deceased applicant to retain the said quarter for six months. Learned advocate for the respondents under the instruction of the officer of the respondents present in the Court submitted that the respondents will allow the widow and children of the deceased applicant to retain the quarters up to 21st November, 1992. He also submitted that the case of the deceased applicant regarding his prayer for normal rate at rent Rs. 85/- per month will be considered sympathetically by the respondents. This application is disposed of as the applicant has expired but with the observation that the respondents will not disturb the widow and children of the deceased applicant of their possession of the quarters still 21st November, 1992. No order as to costs.
